

The Gas Station

The owner of a gas station located in Austria contacted our firm and asked for our help with their series of complex problems. In particular, they had a large problem with the relationship between the 5 people they employed. This problem had grown so much that it was now negatively affecting the customers who used the gas station and having serious repercussions for the entire business. The owner's wife was also helping with the business as well.

Our first step was to perform a systematic Metaphysical & Energetic check to find out what all the stresses within the gas station were:

- a) We performed the standard building, geopathic and radiesthesia checks along with a geomancy, Feng Shui and environmental analysis.
- b) It was also important to look at the psychological health, overall health and living conditions in connection with many other broad and equally important areas.

Through our Energetic (Metaphysical) check we saw that there was indeed a connection between the gas station's problems and the owner's personal problems at home. These problems then had an influence on the similar situation and relationship problems that gas station was having. These home problems were playing a huge role in the causes for the relationship problems suffered by the gas station employees.

In order for the gas station consultation to come to a successful conclusion, it was absolutely necessary that we work on and fix additionally the problems the owner was having at home. In other words our consultation did not just end with the analysis of the gas station (with regards to the connections between all of the health, interpersonal relationships and the psychological topics); but rather we also performed a consultation on the owner's personal life by focusing on the family's relationship with one another.

This is yet another advantage of our complex, multi-layered and extensive consultation service "The One-Stop Consultancy" (please see also Chapter 8, question 6).

The most decisive and key point with regards to our consultation service is that we always closely analyse the causes of the existing problems before we develop a course of action with regards to working on and fixing them.

The gas station owner and his family worked together very well and put all of our recommended and necessary suggestions into practice. The consultation's results and above all success were outstanding for both the family and the gas station employees, as well as for other unsuspecting persons:

- 1) With regards to the gas station - the outstanding teamwork resulted in a 20% increase in overall turnover.
- 2) The owner's personal life has also been improved in the following ways:
  - * The relationship between the entire family has improved
  - * The overall health has improved
  - * The careers of both the parents and their daughters (22 and 18 years old) have taken off
  - * The youngest - a son - has also improved tremendously in school

- * In addition there have been improvements in many other areas that are important and can influence a family's overall standard of living (as explained in question 10, Chapter 8)

The success experienced by the family after the consultation was not short lived either. The family showcased in this example continued to experience happiness many times over for both the months and years that followed. The consultation's outcome has triggered and set into motion a chain reaction which had a positive effect on the family's success.

(Up until this point- May 2004- it has been 3 years since the initial consultation).

If existing problems, stresses and blocks- and in particular the causes for such problems- are adjusted and solved then there will no longer be obstacles in the way and we can really create a life where not only we as people, but also our children and loved ones, can live in good health, with success and therefore enjoy happiness to its fullest potential.
